Kerr Regional History Center to Reopen September 30th

Kerrville, Texas (September 29, 2014) – The Kerr Regional History Center will reopen on Tuesday, September 30, 2014 after undergoing structural repairs. The Kerr Regional History Center is open Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Staff and volunteers are available to assist visitors with the many resources, both print and electronic, including Ancestry.com, Newspaper Archive, local obituary indexes, and local and state vital records. There is no charge to use Kerr Regional History Center resources and visitors are not required to have a Library card to access the computers; minimal charges will be assessed for printing and copying in accordance with the Library's approved fee schedule.

The Kerr Regional History Center, located at 425 Water Street occupies the house designed by Atlee B. Ayres for Whitfield Scott Schreiner in 1914. The H-E-B Foundation donated the building to the City of Kerrville for use as a history center in 1996 and the Kerr Regional History Center opened its doors in 2003. The house will celebrate its 100th anniversary this year and has completed a successful application for a historical marker from the Texas Historical Commission.
